

*Published by Chabad of NW Metro Denver 4505 W 112th Ave. Westminster, CO 80031
www.theChabadHouse.com*
Excerpted from 60 Days by Simon Jacobson. Reprinted with permission from www.meaningfulife.com

Exercise
Do you feel that loving G-d and loving people is the same thing? Give an example of how you have been able to apply this in your life? With what result.

Loving G-d and others

When Abraham interrupted a conversation with G-d shortly after his circumcision at 99 years of age and welcomed three guests into his tent the Talmud concludes that “welcoming guests is more powerful than welcoming G-d.”

Abraham knew this to be the case because he saw that doing a kindness to another human being was a greater manifestation of his own love to G-d.

The deeper he loved G-d the more he loved others. Abrahams love for God was in part defined by selflessness, by doing for others.